

The Broken Lights

Bio

The Broken Lights formed in the summer of 2010 when vocalist/guitarist Tyler Cochran got together with bassist Andy Uzzel and drummer Zach Grove. After tossing around different band names, the three finally settled on “The Broken Lights” referring to a Beatle’s lyric in “Across the Universe.” The three of them soon found that they had a musical chemistry that none of them had experienced before. After just one practice the three played a small lawn concert and received great reviews on the it. They continued to practice and play gigs around the area, while beginning to write their own originals, including their signature song, “Hello Chicago.” The band has played in many varieties of places and events ranging from playing to a packed crowd at The BRD House in Englewood to a concert for school children at Grafton Kennedy Elementary. The band is primarily a rock group, with strong influences from the blues. The Broken Lights are currently working hard on writing originals, booking shows, and coming up with new ways to entertain their audience.
